Henry C. Fulcher Dies From Burns

Scalded for several minutes in boiling water in which he stood above his waist, Henry C. Fulcher, fireman at the S. H. Frank Tanning Company's plant here, received burns early Sunday morning from which he passed away shortly after midnight.

Fulcher was on the night shift in the fire room and was alone except for the night watchman, Salvatore Bartolomei, who had passed through the fireroom just prior to the fatal accident. Fulcher had mentioned to the watchman at the time of his visit that a light over the hot well, into which the exhaust steam from the plant was run, was out and that he would have to put a new globe into its place.

Hearing a scream from the fire room a few minutes after he had left, Bartolomei hurried back and found the fireman in the hot well clinging to the sides of the well and with all of his body below the waist submerged in the boiling water. The watchman endeavored to pull Fulcher from the well, but was unable to lift him. He then ran for a ladder on which he was able to rescue the injured man.

Fulcher, though terribly burned, was not unconscious, and directed that the watchman go for a doctor.

Dr. F. S. Gregory was summoned and while the watchman was seeking a physician, Fulcher cut the clothes from his scalded body. He was removed to the Redwood City hospital, where he lived several hours. Although so severely burned, the injury had destroyed all feeling in the afflicted portions and Fulcher suffered no great pain in view of what he had gone through. He remained conscious for several hours and was able to talk to a few friends who were allowed to see him. To them he gave instructions for the disposal of his property, asking that B. E. Myers administrate his estate.

The deceased was a native of England. He has, as far as is known, only two surviving relatives, two sisters in England. His mother passed away in England about three years ago. He was never married. For the past 25 years Fulcher had been a resident of this city and or all of that period had been employed as fireman at the Frank tannery. He was one of the best known members of the Methodist church of this city and an ardent worker in that institution. He had hardly missed a Sunday attendance at that church in the past quarter century, and all social events at that church were enlivened by his dry humor, generally expressed to poetical meter.

An inquest was held on Tuesday at which Dr. F. S. Gregory, who attended the deceased, Frank Marcus, vice-president of the tanning company, and S. Bartolomei, the watchman, each testified. It was stated that the accident was caused when a plank on which Fulcher was standing to remove the light, broke, throwing him into the hot well below. His death resulted from shock caused by the severe burns.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the church he so often frequented. The services were conducted jointly by Rev. A. H. Clark, present pastor of the church, and Rev. W. G. Trugeon of San Jose, who was pastor of the church here in 1912, and who was a personal friend of the deceased. The church was filled with sorrowing friends of the deceased and many floral tributes showed the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. Interment was in Alta Mesa cemetery at Mayfield.

RANCHER KILLED BY HAY FORK

Struck in the neck by a hay fork as it slipped from a bail of hay which he was helping to hoist into a barn, John G. Clarey was almost instantly killed Wednesday morning. Clarey, with Joe Limacher and Otto Barhler, was employed in hoisting hay into the barn of the Britt ranch, near Woodside. Clarey was placing the fork into the hay while one of his companions drove a team which hoisted the hay into the barn. By some chance the fork slipped as the hay was being lifted, and released from its load flew back and struck Clarey in the left side of the neck. The fork was removed by the companions of the injured man and he was taken in a car to the Redwood City hospital.

Although the man was rushed to the hospital with all possible speed, it was found on arrival that he had died enroute. Dr. J. L. Ross, who was summoned, stated that he must have died soon after being hit by the fork, as the artery on the left side of his neck was severed, and death would ensue from loss of blood.

An inquest was held yesterday morning by Coroner W. A. Brooke at the parlors of the James Crowe Company. Here it was found that the death of the rancher was purely accidental.

The deceased was 48 years of afe. He was a native of Pennsylvania, and is survived by a son, Edward Barber of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Nelly Stroner of Palo Alto. Funeral arrangements had not been announced yesterday.

Skeleton Found While Grading Foundation

When excavations were being made for a building on the brow of a hill near San Carlos recently workmen were surprised to find that among the earth removed were human bones. G. F. Whitworth of San Carlos, engineer in charge of the work, was called to investigate the find. Whitworth found the bones to be a part of an ancient skeleton buried many years ago and badly crumbled.

The skeleton was buried according to the ancient stellar cult, sitting upright, face to the north. This is the posture of the "thrice bent man," remains of whom are found throughout the world, and who flourished for many centuries before the latest solar religion spread throughout most parts of the world. In a few isolated spots of the world today, however, live the ancient stellar people still burying their dead as this ancient skeleton was found, in a sitting position.

The bones were gathered together and were sent by Whitworth to the Associated Colleges in San Francisco.

New Traffic Laws In Effect Today

All departments of the Division of Motor Vehicles today made preparations for the enforcement of the new motor vehicle act which become effective today.

The division's force of more than 200 officers was prepared to enforce the new 40-mile speed limit, having received instructions from Frank G. Snook, chief of the division, that no motorists are allowed to exceed that limit. The clerical force had ordered new supplies preparatory to carrying out the new provisions relative to registrations and keeping the records.

It will now be mandatory for the division to give examinations to all applicants for new drivers' licenses after the law becomes effective. Applications received up to midnight tomorrow night will be recognized as coming under the old law.

The division may, if it deems it desirable, cancel the operators card of any driver who has had a card for three years and require him to take an examination as to his physical and mental fitness to drive.

Drivers who have lost their licenses and make application for renewal may also be subjected to an examination at the discretion of the division.

Likewise, the division may require the non-resident, who has never secured a license in California before to take an examination.

Another important change in the new motorists "bible" provides that any persons convilted of reckless driving three times within a period of twelve months shall automatically lose his icense, the ay classifying him as an habitually reckless driver. A conviction of speeding cannot be counted against the motorist in such cases.

Juries are given power to fix the punishment in cases of conviction for driving while intoxicated. This provision was added as a means of securing more convictions as it was found that under the old law, which classed the offense as a felony punishable by a prison sentence, juries were reluctant to bring in verdicts of guilty.

The division also prepared to comply with another section of the new act requiring that a complete record of accidents involving injury and death be kept with their causes and locations. Motorists involved in such accidents are now required to make a report to police officials and failure is deemed a misdemeanor. Police officials must, in turn, report to the division. This will stop the "covering up" of accidents.

Garages and parking stations are required, under the new law to keep a record of cars stored longer than 12 hours and to report to the police when a car has been stored longer than 30 days if the name and address of the owner is unknown.

Another provision, aimed at the stolen car evil, requires dealers to give notice of the sale of used cars to the division. Notice was required on new cars only under the old law.

It is likewise made a mis-demeanor to withold a certificate of ownership when the purchaser is entitled to it.

Muffler cut-outs must be eliminated from all cars under the act by January 1, 1929.

According to best information received by the division, the Wagy bill, which made material changes in the fee paid by commercial trucks, will not go into effect Friday as enough signatures to hold it up by referendum are said to have been secured. In this case, Snook announced, the division will adhere to the present fee schedule in the motor vehicle act until the Wagy bill has been decided at the November eection in 1928.

APARTMENT HOTEL PLANNED FOR ARCH STREET CORNER

Plans are now in the hands of contractors for a three-story apartment hotel to be erected on the corner of Arch and Brewster streets by the Cumming Sisters of this city. The owners of this property have this week sold another parcel of land and business building located on the corner of Broadway and the highway. The block was purcahsed by San Francisco parties for the sum of $40,500.

"HIGH POWERED" SALESMAN BLAMED IN SUIT FILED

Alleging that promises made by a land salesman induced them to buy a piece of land in Newbridge Park, and that none of the promises have been fulfilled, H. Duthen and his wife, Louise Duthen, this week filed suit against the Newbridge Realty Company seeking the return of the money they have paid on the lot.

In his complaint Duthen lists the promises made by the salesman; in five years the property was to be worth $25,000, the defendants would secure a lessee for the property who would pay from $200 to $500 monthly for the property and who would employ Duthen as gardener at $150 per month. The Southern Pacific Company was to erect a station near the property. A new highway was to be built and a city hall was planned for the locality.

All of these promises have failed in fulfillment Duthen states. The price of the land was $4500 and a first payment of $875 was made. The plaintiffs seek the return of this amount and the cancellation of their contract.

Work will be started shortly at Bakersfield for the erection of an eight-story Class A hotel building for the Padre Hotel Corporation. The structure will be erected at Eighteenth and H streets, Bakersfield. It will occupy at lot 107 by 115 feet. It will contain 916 rooms with 100 per cent baths, steam heating system, ventilating system and electric elevators. The ground floor will be devoted to stores. The structure will cost about $600,000.

Federal and State loans to veterans have resulted in a rather heavy home building program in Visalia thus far in 1927. Twenty-eight new houses have been erected in the first six months of the year and building permits reached $122,985 in that period, or $40,000 above the same period a year ago. About half of the new dwellings are credited as due to the loans.

George Magladry, deputy fish and game warden of Modesto, assisted by Guy Tabler in charge of the fish hatcheries at Wawona, this week planted 60,000 steel head trout in the south fork of the Merced river near Wawona. They will plant another 100,000 in the same river at a later date they announced. Magladry and his assistants also have planted 50,000 in the south and middle forks of the Tuolumne river.

Fire destroyed a historic covered wagon used in the early days of California by Carsten Grupe in trading activities throughout the northern section of the state when more than 300 acres of grain on five ranches near Stockton were swept by flames last week. The wagon has appeared in parades here and was a feature of the '49 celebration in Sacramento.

The Southern Pacific Company filed a petition last week with the state railroad commission asking a rehearing of the order requiring cooperation with the Santa Fe and the Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railway companies in the contruction of a $10,000,000 union station. The railroad commission recently issued the order requiring construction on the new Los Angeles terminal to begin ninety days after the interstate commerce commission sanctioned the plans.

That old line in the effect that "everybody works but father" doesn't hold good when federal and state investigators turn the spotlight on this working world. Forty-one per cent of the population is at work, according to L. E. Ross, chief of the state bureau of vital statistics at Sacramento, and this group supports the other 59 per cent not recorded as gainfully employed. Among those not gainfully employed, wives, children and dependents lead, rather than lazy fathers.

Contracts for a laboratory building at the Marin Junior College at Kentfield, Marin County, to be constructed at a cost of $27,600, have been awarded by the board of directors of the college. Work will begin immediately. The building will be of frame construction with stucco exterior, and will form one side of a quadrangle which will take form as other units of the college are built.

An option of a 40-acre tract was taken in Los Angeles by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company in Los Angeles, on a site for proposed $7,000,000 manufacturing plant.

City and chamber of commerce officials and civic leaders and enthusiasts participated in the ground-breaking ceremony at the Red Bluff federal building site, held last week. The federal building will be erected at a cost of approximately $75,000, and will replace the present quarters, on Walnut Street, near the Southern Pacific right-of-way, which are held to be inadequate.

The operations of the Pickwick Stages will be extended over an all year route from Los Angeles to St. Louis, Mo., within sixty days. This is according to a statement made in Los Angeles by Charles F. Wren, president of the line, who added that the system will be pushed to the Atlantic seaboard as soon as a logical route can be determined and a few details considered.

Forty miles and no more will be the policy of the state division of motor vehicles when the new speed limit becomes effective on July 29th. This was announced by Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehicles. Under the present speed limit of 35 miles an hour, the traffic officers have been lenient with sane and careful drivers, allowing a margin of five miles' grace. But when the forty-mile limit becomes effective, forty miles an hour will be the top speed permitted.

The Western Pacific Railroad extension from Kingdom to Terminous where the road will tap the rich San Joaquin delta region, will be completed and ready for operation before the end of October, according to H. The extension will cost over $500,000 and will include warehouses, packing sheds and water-to-car loading facilities.

The latter two counties have extensive lode mines. Amador county has fifteen lode and ten placer mines in operation.

Two more wells came roaring in for Julian stockholders at the Alamitos area of the Field Beach Oil field late last week, California-Eastern Oil Company officially reported. The first to come in was the Fleming well. It was reported a 700 barrel well. The second to come in was the Fueller well. This was the well that blew out two weeks ago and caused the fire. Engineers said the well was bringing in 2,250 barrels and getting stronger every minute, with a 26.2 gravity and only 10 per cent mud and emulsion.

Bobbie Hardenbrook, 3 years old, broke through a board covering a well at Antler, near Redding and dropped 30 feet into water six feet deep. George Greenwood, sitting on the porch 20 feet away, saw the boy disappear. Running to the well he slid down the bucket line so speedily his hands were blistered. He found the boy sinking but grabbed him and then set him in the bucket. Members of the family above pulled the lad to the top. Bobbie was none the worse for the experience, save that his legs were skinned up a bit in the fall down the rock-walled well.

Durward Wittenmeyer, 16-year-old slayer of Mrs. Fannie Weigle of Pomona was convicted of second degree murder in Los Angeles by a jury which had been deliberating for three days. The jury of nine mothers and three fathers, brought in its verdict 14 minutes after it had reported to Judge Fletcher Bowron that it still was deadlocked. Sentence will be passed upon Wittenmeyer this week. The youth will be sentenced automatically to serve from 10 years to life in San Joaquin penitentiary as the jury failed to accompany its verdict with a recommendation for leniency.

Near-beer flowing on the streets of Los Angeles was a wildly welcomed sight when broken barrels bumped against the curb from a truck that was overturned in a collision with a trolly car. A score of thirsty citizens rushed to the rescue with dishpans and other utensils hastily impressed into the duties of the old-time "subs-pail."

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

Nuts Now Quickly Dried

Nut growers in the United States have found one more way to beat nature at her own game. They now dry walnuts by electricity in 24 hours instead of waiting weeks for sun and wind to do it by the method used previous to the past season. This enables them to ship to market when the market is ready. More than 35 per cent of the California walnut crop was dried by the new means in 1926 and a greater proportion is expected this year.

American Law First and Alone

AMERICA stands today unique among nations, a firm rock in a sea of turmoil, factional warfare and intrigue. We, who are blessed by the privilege of living under the protection of American law in a country where the rights of the individuall finds recognition and where everything conspires to happiness and prosperity, can look with pity upon those who are the pawns of tyrants and despots. We may even welcome these oppressed people to our own great land and bid them live under the protection of our government side by side with our own people.

But we cannot be too careful. Are we sure that these people who seek our welcoming shores come here to enjoy the privileges of freedom, or are they are emissaries of a sinister power whose tentacles are even now encroaching upon our traditional liberties?

We read this week of a body of men, foreigners, living apparently under the government of the United States, yet owing allegiance to a dictator whose policy of government is at variance in every respect with our ideas of freedom. This dictator, too, by the way, claims the right of the allegiance of every native of the country, which he rules, whether a citizen of another country or not.

Too often foreigners have used the United States as a battlefield for their factional warfare. We hear of mass meetings of one nationality and another called to discuss or protest something transpiring in another land. When they accept the protection of this country, it seems to us that they should bury their tribal or racial hatchets and live as American citizens.

While we may be interested in happenings in Russia, Italy, China, Ireland or any other country, we believe that it is decidely out of place for alleged Americans to use the liberties granted them by a beneficient government to carry on a warefare brought here from their former land, much more so to proclaim allegiance to a faction or ruler of a country other than our own.

America gives much to the immigrant, and those who have much to give should ask much in return, or the gifts will not be appreciated. Americans must ask and demand that those who seek the protection of our government, give in return a full measure of allegiance. There is no room here for the half citizen who is willing to receive the protection of a democracy and who yet owes his allegiance to a despot or any other foreign power. And to the American nothing should count which does not affect America. We may sympathize with one or another faction in some other country, but if we are to be Americans—let's live, work and talk for American ideals. There are plenty left in the old country to raise cain without our assistance. And the correlary to this is: if we are not Americans let's for Pete's sake, get out of here and make room for someone who appreciates the benefits of a democracy.

Killing For Pay

WE have heard of working one's way through college or of small boys working their way into a circus. We have even heard of a few people working their way into society. But the latest feat that has come to our notice is that of a convict who is working his way through the penitentary by hanging his more unfortunate fellow prisoners. With fees received for this work he plans to have enough to live after his term behind the rock walls is completed.

We do not believe in capital punishment, and have often stated the fact in these columns. We do believe, however, that a penitentary should be a place of reformation, and can see little hope for reformation if a prisoner is to be engaged during his confinement as a hangsman. Perhaps it would be as well to allow a murderer to go right on with his occupation in the penitentary as to force the unpleasant task on another, but we see little difference in the fees paid for killing a man by hanging and the swag to be derived from a murder.

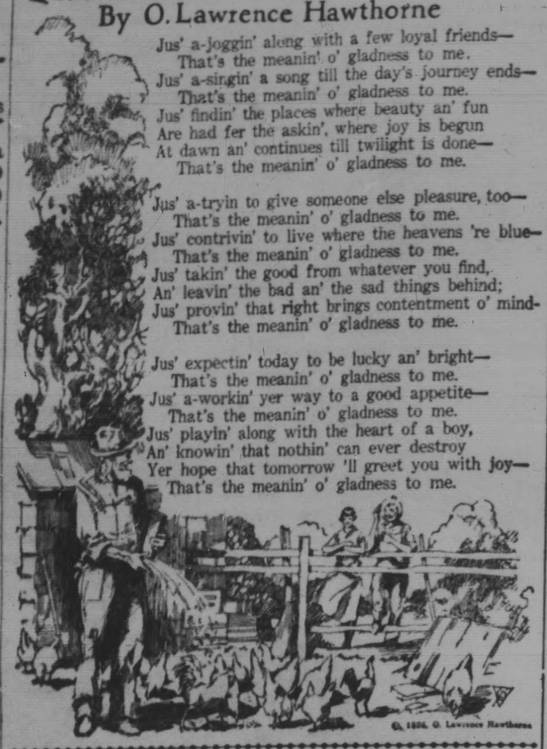
The Baumes Law

AFTER six months' trial in New York the Baumes Law, which increases the difficulty of obtaining a parole from a prison and provides, among other things, for life sentences after the fourth conviction of felony, has been declared a success. It was stated by Mr. Allen of the National Surety Company that there had been an apparent reduction of 25 per cent. in burglary and robbery cases since the enactment of this law. He urged the adoption of similar legislation in other states.

The Meanin' o' Gladness

By O. Lawrence Hawthorne



Jus' a-joggin' along with a few loyal friends—
That's the meanin' o' gladness to me.
Jus' a-singin' a song till the day's journey ends—
That's the meanin' o' gladness to me.
Jus' findin' the places where beauty an' fun
Are had fer the askin', where joy is begun
At dawn an' continues till twilight is done—
That's the meanin' o' gladness to me.

Jus' a-tryin to give someone else pleasure, too—
That's the meanin' o' gladness to me.
Jus' contrivin' to live where the heavens 're blue—
That's the meanin' o' gladness to me.
Jus' takin' the good from whatever you find,
An' leavin' the bad an' the sad things behind;
Jus' provin' that right brings contentment o' mind—
That's the meanin' o' gladness to me.

Jus' expectin' today to be lucky an' bright—
That's the meanin' o' gladness to me.
Jus' a-workin' yer way to a good appetite—
That's the meanin' o' gladness to me.
Jus' playin' along with the heart of a boy,
An' knowin' that nothin' can ever destroy
Yer hope that tomorrow 'll greet you with joy—
That's the meanin' o' gladness to me.

Large Party At Summer Outing of Press Association

The summer outing of the members of the California Press Association was held this year at Lake Tahoe and the Transcontintal Highways Exposition at Reno. The party left San Francisco on a special train of Pullmans Friday evening, July 1, arriving at Tahoe Tavern the next morning for breakfast. The association has visited Lake Tahoe on several occasions but heretofore has always had to change cars at Truckee and travel thence to the Tavern over a narrow guage railroad. This road has been broad gauged and the trains run through, every day in the year, to the Tavern. So it is now possible to "go to bed in San Francisco ani get up at Tahoe Tavern," making the trip all the more delightful to the traveller. Officials of the Southern Pacific Company accompanied the newspaper party and saw to it that no comfort that could be provided was missing.

Lake Tahoe is a place of never-ending charm. No matter how often one visits the lake, there are always new vistas opening up, be it forest, lake, stream, or snow-clad mountain peak. The Tavern itself has been newly furnished and made more attractive than ever.

Paper Mill Visited

One of the feaures of the outing was a visit to the Crown Williamette Company's paper manufacturing plant between Truckee an Reno. At this plant is manufactured the finer grades of wrapping papers used in drug stores, candy stores and for wrapping fruit. The newspaper folk saw the spruce logs going into the grinders "in the raw" and coming off the big presses a finished article—in all the colors of the rainbow and in various designs.

Over Truckee River Highway

The journey from Lake Tahoe to Reno was made by the party in automobiles provided and driven by the newspaper publishers of Nevada and citizens of Reno. The Californians were interested to know that the last link in the Truckee River highway between Truckee and Reno had been completed, although part of the cement was still being cured, necessitating one short detour. This stretch of highway was expected to be thrown open for travel in a few days. The highway is wide and smooth, the grades are hardly worthy the name, and it is possible to drive over it with perfect safety and comfort. The trip from Reno to Truckee now only requires a little over an hour's ordinary driving, the much dreaded Dog Valley grade having been entirely eliminated.

Reno Is Captured

At the Nevad State line the editors were met by Mayor Roberts of Reno and the party was escorted by a fleet of speed cops to the Reno City Hall. There refreshfents were served and the newspaper folk were greeted by Governor Balzar, Mayor Roberts and other citizens, after which the members of the party were taken to Lincoln Hall, the boys' dormitory of the University of Nevada, where they were domiciled during their stay in Nevada's metropolis.

The University of Nevada, by the way, has gained an enviable distinction in the educational world. It has over eght hundred students, many of them from California. Its courses in journalism and in mining, as well as the excellence of the faculty in general, has given the university a standing of a high order

Guests of Nevada Publishers

Saturday evening, July 9, the California newspaper publishers and their ladies were honor guests at a dinner given by the Nevada Press Association at the Reno Twentieth Century Club. Editor Bert L. Selkirk, publisher of the Garnedrville Record-Courier, president of the Nevada Press Association, served as toastmaster and introduced E. C. Mulcahy of the Sparks Tribune, who delivered the address of welcome. C. O. Dunbar of the Santa Rosa Press Democrat, responded for the Californians. A distinctive feature of the dinner was the drinking of a toast to Former Governor Friend W. Richardson, who for the first time in twenty-five years, was not in attendance at the annual outing of the association by reason of his European tour.

Shepard's Great Work at Exposition

After the dinner the entire party went to the Exposition grounds, where they were the special guests of the California Commissioner, W. A. Shepard and Mrs. Shepard. To "Shep", as he is familiarly called by his brother editors, belongs much of the credit for the splendid part California is playing in making the Reno Exposition the success it is. Following the appropriation of $100,000 by the California legislature, former Governor Richardson appointed Editor Shepard as California Commissioner. He designed a beautiful building of Spanish architedture, 50x150, which will be the only building that will remain to permanetnly mark the site of the Exposition. The building will be donated to the Reno American Legion Post at the close of the exposition. Editor Shepard solicited and obtained exhibits from many California counties. These were so numerous that they overflowed the building and a large tent was provided for this overflow. The California building was built on the exposition grounds along the esplanade of Reno's new public park, only a short distance from the Truckee river, which flows directly through the city of Reno. Serving without pay, Mr. and Mrs. Shepard have made California's participation in the Reno Exposition stand out as a splendid achievement They have devoted months of time to the service of their state and are deserving the thanks and praise of the people of California. Mr. Shepard is the publisher of the Auburn Herald, and is one of the pioneer newspapermen of the state.

California Day Ceremonies

Saturday was also California Day at the Exposition and Senator Jack Inman of Sacramento responded as the personal representative of Governor C. C. Young, Assemblywoman Cora M. Woodbridge of Placer County, California, also responded to the governor's welcome and acted as chairman of the evening, following a most gracious introduction by Mayor Roberts.

The exposition grounds proved a source of enchanting wonder to the vistors, with its attractive exhibits and its alluring setting along the banks of the Truckee river.

Footprints and Executions

Sunday afternoon, automobiles were again placed at the disposal of the California publishers and their ladies for a trip to the state capital, Carson City, and Virginia City. At Carson City the Californians visited the state prison and were shown the foot prints made, it is estimated thirty thousand years ago by the Giant Ground Sloth, a prehistoric animal, about which so much has been written by scientists in recent years. The execution chamber at the prison, where condemned persons are executed by lethal gas in sixteen secondh, was also visited.

Historic Carson and Virginia City

Enroute from Carson City to Virginia City, the visitors were shown places where, in the early days, large cities were located. In most cases a few crumbling buildings are all that remain. Nearing Gold Hill and Virginia City, the visitors saw hundreds of "prospect holes" long since abandoned. Some time was spent at Virginia City, the great mining center of Nevada's boom days. It is said that the mines of the vicinity have produced to date $900,000,000 in gold and silver. Virginia City, once a metropolis with 50,000 population, now has a population of about 1500. Mark Twain's old printing plant is still there and stories of Twain were told to the visitors by the old timers of the place.

Richardson Re-elected President

Tuesday morning the Californians were transported in automobiles from Reno to Truckee where they took the train for their homes. On the way home, when near the famous old mining town of Dutch Flat, the annual election of officers was held. Former Governor Friend W. Richardson was re-elected president by unanimous vote for the twenty-fifth time, and the following telegram was directed sent to Governor Richardson to reach him at Boston on July 16, the date he lands from his Press Association, while dinner European tour:

"Members of the California guests of the Nevada Press Association July 9, drank a toast to 'our globe-trotting, hence absent president.' Re-elected you president and all other officers by unanimous vote at Dutch Flat, July 13 and directed me to send you and your family greetings and welcome, home." The telegram was signed by Vice-President Justus F. Craemer, editor of the Orange News, and who was in charge of the party on the trip.

Stanford Campus is Game Preserve

Practically all of the property of Stanford University, including the campus and building of the institution, is included in the latest California game refuge. Governor C. Young recently sgned a bill creating this unique game preserve.

Over 7,500 acres will be encompassed by the new refuge which includes much timber and brush land and two bodies of water, Searsville and Felt Lakes which are regarded as excellent shelters for water fowl. The timber and brush regions will make good protection for birds and small game as well as deer. Many of the latter have been seen on the ridge east of Searsville Lake.

The lowlands afford excellent ground for quail and doves and would be a good vicinity in which to release pheasants as quite a few of these birds have strayed over to the University property from the Alviso District.

Easily approached from Redwood City, this game preservation will undoubtedly be visited by many motorist sight-seers. In fact, this refuge will probably be the most accessible one in California and it will therefore be possible for a large number of people to take advantage of the opportunity to view wild game in the open. The Department of Zoology of the University will be located near the center of the refuge with the idea of collecting much valuable data.

The co-operation of the Fish and Game Commission and Senator Herbert C. Jones has made possible the putting into effect the bill making this territory a game refuge. This bill provides for the punishment of any person who hunts, kills, destroys, or has in his possession any species of bird or animal in any game refuge without a written permit from the Fish and Game Commission. It also prohibits the possession of firearms on the preservation.

TEN ACRES BURNED IN LA HONDA GRADE FIRE

A fire which swept ten acres of scrub oak and young redwood on the Pierson tract near the La Honda grade was paced under control Monday by Fire Warden Bert Werder, assisted by a crew of men from the Bear Gulch water Company, under Eastland Britton, manager of the company. The fire was reported to Werder early Monday morning and the firemen were busy with the blaze until after four o'clock in the afternoon before the danger of its spreading was removed.

FIRST ENTRIES FOR HORSE SHOW ARRIVE

The first entries for the Northern California horse show to arrive from the east came Monday to the office of manager A. P. Fleming.

F. H. Divan & Son, whose farm at Monroe, Wisconsin, is a noted breeding place for Shetland ponies have entered four in the $1000 stake given by the Nipa Hut and fifteeen entries in the class events for shetlands. The entire shipment included twenty-one head, some of them to be delivered to local purchasers.

The Bloomfield Hills Stock Farm, $2000 stake for polo ponies has nineteen entries to date which will be increased before it closes and will not only exceed in money value, but also in number of entries anything ever shown in the west.

Aaron M. Frank department store magnate of Portland. Oregon, has wired manager Fleming that entires have been mailed for his remarkable stable of hunters and jumpers as well as for his roadster, Ratty Miller, Janette, a three-gaited mare and Aloma and Paloma, a pair of hackings for the Ruth M. Lansburg $1000 stake.

A crew of carpenters are engaged in the erection of the arena in the ball park at Stanford University campus. The seating capacity will be 4,500, about half of which will be in the box circle.

The show will be staged six nights and two matinees the week of August 8th to 13th.

Not less than 250 horses will compete in the 95 classes that will be shown for a total prize money of $24,000. For these it is presumed that about 600 entries will be made as many of the horses are eligible to from four to six classes and the forty or more hunters and jumpers can enter a dozen or more events.

Henry Cullins, a celebrated figure in the horse show world, who has in past years tied the ribbons very satisfactorily at Stockton, Los Angeles and Portland, will officiate as judge of the harness and saddle classes. The judges of polo mounts and stock horses are not yet announced.

Marriage Law Now In Effect

No more will Redwood City be the rendezous of moonstruck lovers, and no more will the deputies of County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese be roused from their sleep in the wee hours of the morning by eloping parties desiring marriage licenses. The new law in regard to marriage licenses which went into effect yesterday will make these things relics of the past as far as California is concerned.

The new ruling makes it necessary for applicants for marriage licenses to appear three days previous to granting of the license and make formal application. They must appear at the office of the county clerk again at the time of receiving the license.

The new regulations are intended as barrier to after-party marriages and especially the so-called "gin-marriages." It is believed that the three days' wait between the application and the granting of the license will give the contracting parties time to think matters over before they rush into matrimony.

THREE HOSPITAL MEN SOUGHT ON WARRANTS

Bench warrants for the arrest of three former employees of the United States Veterans' Hospital at Menlo Park were issued this week by Justice of the Peace Ray Griffin, following the failure of the three to appear and receive sentence on a charge of battery. Bail to the amount of $25 each was ordered forfeited.

The three attendants, M. E. Radford, 27, R. T. Soph, 24 and C. F. Williams, 33, were arrested on a charge of battery prefered by C. Anderson, a mental patient at the hospital. The trio appeared for trial in the justice court here and were found guilty after the plaintiff had shown bruises which he alleged were inflicted upon him by the three attendants.

The three were released on posting $25 bail and were ordered to appear for sentence on Monday. When they failed to appear, Judge Griffin ordered the bail forfeited and issued the warrant. Investigation proved that they had left the base hospital.

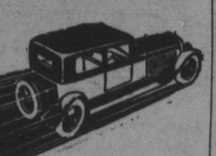
NASH

Leads the World in Motor Car Value



"Come drive" week

July 27th to Aug. 3rd

An invitation to drive the easiest riding cars you ever traveled in

The Three New Series of Nash motor cars, introduced thirty days ago, have won America.

It is their beauty, speed, lowered lines, attractive colors and, above all, their phenomenal new performance which have given so much added impetus to Nash sales. (July 58% greater than any July in Nash history; and production now reaching the unprecedented total of 700 to 800 cars daily.)

Praise for these finer, faster, more luxurious models of Nash is heard everywhere.

Those who have driven them will tell you that supreme riding luxury is accomplished by the new Nash super-springs of secret-process alloy-steel.

They will tell you the engines in these new cars are smoother and quieter than ever.

And they will also tell you that these are the easiest steering cars on earth!

It is the greatest motor car contrast in the world today to step out of your car, and then drive one of these great new models of Nash.

We want you to know that contrast. This is Nash "Come Drive" Week. Courtesy cars are waiting at our showroom for you to try.

All you need to do is step into the car, sit down behind its wheel, and drive it. No sales pressure. No obligation. Don't buy any car today, until you have driven a Nash!

NASH ANNOUNCES NATION - WIDE 'COME DRIVE' WEEK

Announcement is made by The Nash Motors Company of a nation-wide "Come Drive" week to be conducted by dealers throughout America from July 27 to August 3. During this period the general public is invited to ride in the new Nash models which have swept the country in popularity since their introduction a month ago. Following the announcement of the new series of cars, Nash show rooms everywhere have been crowded and while production of 700 to 800 cars a day is greater than at any time in the history of the company, orders are in excess of plant capacity.

Because of this situation dealers in many instances have found it impossible to keep cars on hand long enough to thoroughly acquaint their public with the riding qualities and other details of the new cars and a carefully worked-out plan has therefore been arranged by the factory so that for one week, beginning today as many people as possible will have an opportunity, without obligation on their part whatsoever, to drive the new Nash.

"The purpose of this national "Come Drive" week," said E. H. McCarty, general sales manager of the Nash Motors Company, "is to give every one who is interested in automobiles an opportunity to see for himself how far Nash Motors has gone in engineering and construction of these new cars in the matter of performance and comfort. The appearance of the car speaks for itself but unless a man actually drives the car he cannot possibly appreciate the easy action of the new springs, the ease of steering and the power and flexibility of the motor. We want everyone to know all about the new Nash and it makes no difference whether those who participate in the "Courtesy Drives" are in the market for a new car or not. Dealers and salesmen during this period will not talk sales."

The "Come Drive" week was inaugurated last night by a Nash radio programme, broadcast through station W E A F of New York over a country-wide chain of important stations. The half hour musical programme was preceded by the announcement of the courtesy drives and an invitation to the public was extended in behalf of the Nash dealers by the radio announcer. The "hook-up" of stations was one of the biggest called for in the programme of the National Radio Broadcasting Company.

Appelants Win Decision in Road Improvement

The Supreme court this week by a unanimous decision held that the Road District Improvement Act of 1907 cannot be applied for road improvements in a district where there is an existing indebtedness. The decision was reached in the appeal of the Municipal Improvement Co., plaintiff vs C. V. Thompson, chairman of the board of supervisors, and others. The supreme court reversed a ruling of the Superior court of this county and upheld the action of the chairman of the board of supervisors in refusing to sign a contract with the plaintiff company for street improvements to be made in Lomita Park under the above mentioned bond act.

The work proposed to be done in Lomita Park was first proposed in September 1923. Plans and specifications were ordered by the supervisors on the 11th of that month and on the 15th of October 1923 a hearing was held before the supervisors. Bids for the work were called for and on November 5 were received and opened. The awarding of the contract was laid over until November 19, at which time the board voted to award the contract to the Municipal Improvement Co.

Subsequently a contract was tendered to Supervisor Thompson, then chairman of the board, for his signature. Thompson refused to sign the contract, stating that he had heard that the proceedings were irregular. Action was later started by the contracting company to compel Thompson to sign the contract for the work.

The plaintiffs in the action were represented by the law firm of Kirkbride & Gordon of San Mateo. Following the filing of the appeal from a judgment of the Superior court in favor of the plaintiffs, Charles Kirkbride appeared before the board of supervisors and asked that the appeal be dropped. This at once was opposed by District Attorney Swart, who stated that even if the board ordered him to take such an action he would refuse to do so. The matter was dropped at that time.

The present ruling of the Supreme court holds that since there is an outstanding indebtedness of $18.000 under the same bond act, that the present proceedings are irregular. The act contains a form of bond which states that there is no other indebtedness than the principal of the bond.

The attorneys representing Thompson and the other defendants in the case were Franklin Swart, John D. Willard and Jas. T. O'Keefe of Redwood City, J. E. McCurdy of San Francisco and J. W. Coleberd of South San Francisco.

The Gorgas Idea
Better Health Longer Life
GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

SHALL WE BECOME A NEAR SIGHTED NATION? NEAR CAN BE PREVENTED

By William Thornwall Davis, M. D.
Washington, D. C.

Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Von Bismarck, conceiving the idea of a Germany that would be mighty, appreciated the necessity of universal education, so an intensive schooling system was established. The youtr of the land was crowded into school buildings which were inadequate as to proper space, ventilation, and light. The hours of the day were too long, the months of schooling too extended, and the vacation period too short, and as a result, the eyesight of thousands of children was damaged.

Immature tissues should not be subjected to strain or over fatigue. Particularly is this true of the tissue of such delicate organ as the eye. Long hours of schools, prolonging the school year well into the tummer as we do subjects these tender young tissues to a strain and over fatigue they are not strong enough to withstand. The result is that the coats of the eye-ball give way and the eye-ball stretches and becomes elongated.

Sitting inside a house or school and using the eyes for too long a time is destructive to the little pupil's healh and strength, and the result of this devitalization of the child is to make him puny. All this reacts upon the eye, of course, and as the youngsters are kept using their eyes almost all the time when they are in school, this is the organ which gives way; it has most of the work to do.

The near sight, once started, has a strong tendency to grow worse. This tendency is strongly hereditary; near sighted parents are apt to have near sighted children. A near sighted child invariably loves to read. Why? Because he cannot see well and hence cannot compete with those in the active school life. The same thing occurs later in life. He is handicapped by his near sight and is condemned to glasses all his life. This unhappy state of affairs can be prevented but cannot be cured.

The prevention is simple to tell, but not always easy to carry out. Do not keep the little boys and girls in school too many hours, or start them at school too young. Do not let overzealous teachers crowd them in their studies. Do not let your children read too much at home, particularly in the morning before breakfast, or in bed at night.

Little folks should be out of doors and at play during their hours out of school. Keep them away from the movies, except once a week perhaps, and then see that they sit far back. Se that they get plenty of sleep, nourishing food, and out-of-door exercise. Only in this way may near sight be prevented. It cannot be cured. The little child doesn't know; it does what it is told to do. We do know, or should know, and it is our fault if the children are near sighted.

WILL OF MENLO MAN LEAVES ESTATE TO COUSIN

The last will and testament of Ferdinand Reis, Jr., who died in San Francisco on July 22, 1927, was filed for probate on Tuesday. The will was executed on May 5, 1926, and was witnessed by F. D. Madison and Marshall P. Madison.

By the terms of the will, W. S. Pardy, a friend of the deceased, is left the sum of $5000. Gustave B. Reis and John Reis, sons of the late John O. Reis, are bequeathed the sum of $5000 each, Frances Harris Stent, a cousin, is named as sole executrix to serve without bonds and is not required to secure an order of court in the sale of any portion of the property of the estate. She is to receive the sum of $2000 a month for her services as executrix during the settlement of the estate. She is bequeathed the remainder of the estate and is to hold same, receiving the rents, income and issues during her life time. At her death the entire estate is to be given in equal shares to her four children, namely, Frances Reis Stent, Ernest Stent, Katherine Reis Stent, and Ferdinand Reis Stent. The children are not to come into the property until they reach the age of twenty-five years. Should Mrs. Stent pass away before they reach that age, then the Mercantile Trust Company of San Francisco is to take charge of the estate and handle it for the heirs.

Christian Reis, Jr., a brother, is not mentioned in the will for the reason that he is already amply provined for.

The deceased was well known in San Mateo county. He had a large estate near the Bear Gulch Water Company's property back of Menlo Park, where he spent his summers with his cousin, Mrs. Stent and her husband. He was the son of the late Christian Reis, one of the early treasurers of the City and County of San Francisco.

The petition recites that the estate is valued in excess of $10,000. It is however, worth in the neighborhood of a million dollars.

REFRIGERATION CHECKS DISEASE GERM SPREAD

If every family in the United States guarded its foodstuffs by refrigeration agains the onslaught of bacteria and attendant deterioration, the diseases yearly causing the demise of many infants and young children could be checked substantially.

This is the statement of Prof. Charles E. A. Winslow, who holds the Lauder Chair of Public Health at the Yale School of Medicine and who is giving a series of lectures at present on the Pacific Coast in the interests of public health. Prof. Winslow is a member of the board of directors of the National Tuberculosis Association and is widely known throughout the country.

"Molds, yeasts and bacteria are at hand on all sides of us," he said. "They are found in water, air and in the foods we eat. Of course, many of these tiny organisms are harmless and therefore can cause no disease, but there are countless millions of dangerous bacteria, constanly floating around everywhere on the earth's surface. As soon as they find a resting place in a foodstuff which is warm and moist, the multiplication process begins and continues rapidly."

Placing of foods in a well constructed and well iced refrigerator wherein a temperature of about 45 degrees Fahrenheit is maintained, is probably the best means of retarding the growth of the armies of bacteria and preventing them from spreading illness, it was pointed out.

Typhoid and tuberculosis are two of the dread diseases communicable by bacteria in foods and there are scores of other ailments almost as deadly which it is possible for children and older persons to contract if care it not taken in the preservation of the family food suppl, he asserted.

POULTRY

FIND WORMS IN POULTRY FLOCK

Three types of worms are found in considerable number in poultry. They are not fatal to poultry unless they occur in large numbers. However, it is important to control them, as badly infected birds are more likely to contract other ailments, because worms lower their resistance.

From experiment stations where large numbers of diseased birds are examined, it is reported that a big percentage of the poultry sent to them show worm infestation. The more common worms are the large roundworms, small roundworms and tapeworms. In most sections the large roundworms cause the biggest losses.

The large roundworm is found in the small intestine. Its color is white or yellowish white. It is round or cylindrical and from two to four inches long. The female of this species is much larger than the male and is pointed at both ends. The male has a fan-like expansion at the rear end.

In mature poultry, light infestations do not cause any noticeable symptoms, but heavily infested birds will show marked evidences of disease. In younger chicks a lighter infestation is apt to cause illness and death. The symptoms of the worms are not very characteristic, as the same symptoms may be caused by other diseases of the intestinal tract. There may be a loss of appetite, an unthrifty appearance, dullness, emaciation and loss of color in the wattles and comb. There is sometimes a lameness or even a partial paralysis. More advanced cases often show a complete loss of control of both wings and legs. There may or may not be diarrhea.

One of the most successful and practical treatments for roundworms (large and small) is the use of tobacco dust. The California experiment station found that tobacco dust containing 1½ to 2 per cent of nicotine, mixed in the proportion of 2 per cent of the dry mash, by weight, and fed continuously from one to four weeks, removes practically all of the large roundworms and about three-fourths of the small roundworms. This treatment is usually given by mixing the prepared tobacco dust with the dry mash in the proportion of one pound of the tobacco dust to 50 pounds of dry mash. This medicated mash is fed from three to four weeks.

Poor Economy to Crowd Pullets in a Henhouse

Counting pullets before they are housed this fall is not nearly as foolish as counting chickens before they are hatched, practical poultrymen believe. After counting the pullets, the good poultryman should measure his poultry house and do a little figuring. The light breeds should have 3 square feet of floor space per hen and the heavier breeds, including Reds, Rocks, Orpingtons, and Wyandottes, should have 4 square feet per hen. Less than this area of floor space will not only cut down the egg production of the flock, but it will increase the chances for disease infection.

If the poultry raiser has more pullets than space and has no chance to build more good housing facilities, he had best cull his pullets to about the right number. One hundred well-grown, vigorous and healthy pullets that are well housed in plenty of space will return far more profit than 150 pullets of all sizes and stages of development that are crowded into the same house.

"Pip" Not a Disease

What is known as "pip" is really inflammation of the mouth. It is a symptom which occurs in many cases of cold or fever, when the nostrils are obstructed and the fowl breathes through its mouth. In that case the mouth and tongue become hard and dry, and a bony tip may form on the tongue. Generally, moistening the tongue with a few drops of a mixture of equal parts of glycerin and water is about all the treatment needed. Do not attempt to remove by force.

Mash Chick Ration

An all-mash ration for chicks is advised by the specialists. It is the Wisconsin all-mash ration and consists of 80 pounds ground yellow corn, 20 pounds wheat middlings, 5 pounds pearl grits, 5 pounds raw bone meal, 1 pound of salt and skim milk in place of water. The milk should be used in place of water during the first six weeks. At the end of this time milk may gradually be replaced by adding 15 or 20 pounds of meat scraps to the mash mixture.

Discard Homemade Crate

There is little gained in trying to use homemade crates made of rough heavy material. All that you save by not purchasing a galvanized wire crate with a strong bottom is lost in the increased express. With any kind of care in handling, and an occasional patching, the commercial crates with heavy wire sides and tops should be good for about a hundred trips. Such crates show up the birds to good advantage and are easy to open and close.

Good Yearly Record

To insure a good yearly trap-nest record it is important to have the pullets matured and laying about October 1 or slightly after. In spite of all improved methods in breeding, feeding and management, we still have the problem of molt, both winter and molt and fall molt. Leghorn chicks hatched in the middle or latter part of April, and chicks of heavy varieties hatched about one month previously, have the best chance of coming into production early in October.

How to Preserve the Watermelon

THE watermelon enthusiast may have his favorite fruit in the middle of winter if he will go to the little extra trouble of preserving the whole watermelon by painting it with waterproof paint, and then keeping it in the basement in a cool place until time for use.

If one cannot secure a waterproof paint that he is sure of, a good waterproof coating may be made at home by mixing rosin oil, 50 parts; rosin, 30 parts, and white soap, 9 parts. This should be applied warm on the surface of the melon. A rather thick solution should be spread on it, to be sure that all the surface is to be protected. If the melon is whole, and there are no abrasions in the skin, the coating covers the hard shell so that no air or moisture can get to the inner absorptive layers of the melon.

Another recipe is to take 1 part of gluten, mix it with 1½ parts of glycerin and heat it at about 248 degrees F. A slimy mass will be secured which is not only waterproof, but also water-repelling.

Making Use of Old Magazines

ARCTIC explorers put newspapers between their blankets because there is no better insulation against bitter cold and wind than paper. We can apply the same principle in our homes by using old magazines under a thin pad or mattress which alone is not sufficient to keep out the cold.

Thin magazines tied around the milk or cream bottle on wintry days will prevent it freezing if it is left on the window or door step.

Large magazines with double pages may be made useful against moth destruction by wrapping small articles in the sheets after they have been painted with a warm solution of

Paramn .....8 ounces
Naphthaline .....4 ounces

Newspapers are excellent protection against moths if painted with this solution.

In our modern houses and apartments we have forgotten the great insulating and warming properties of paper when placed under rugs and carpets. Heavy magazine paper is even more effective against cold than thin newspaper.

Real Democracy

In the minds of many people, democracy rests upon the colossal untruth that "one man is as good as another," so that a large number are more likely to be right than a small number. In reality democracy rests upon the ubiquitous fact that all men are directly interested in securing good government, while its successes have often been due to its practical recognition of the truth that some men are born to lead and others to follow.—John Fiske.

"Miniatures"

It is usually thought that the derivation of miniature is from the Latin minimum (smallest), but this is not so. There is a verb miniare, to paint with vermilion, from the Latin miniare (minium, native cinnabar, red lead). The true sense of miniature is something painted in minium, red lead. Such paintings were usually small, hence the later meaning. The name was first applied to the ornamental red initial capitals in manuscripts.

Earthquake in Palestine and Transjordania Is Fatal to Hundreds.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

HUNDREDS of men, women and children—perhaps as many as a thousand—were killed in Palestine and Transjordania by the severest earthquake that region has experienced in a hundred years. Thousands were injured and other thousands were rendered homeless. In Jerusalem many famous buildings were seriously damaged, including the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, the Hebrew university, the Dome of the Rock, the Basilica, the Russian church, the Bagdadese synagogue and the government house on the Mount of Olives; but the casualties in the "City of Peace" were few. Elsewhere, especially east and south of the Dead sea, the destruction in towns and villages was almost complete and hundreds of mangled bodies were taken from the ruins of houses. Half of the town of Nablus was utterly wrecked and many inhabitants were killed. It was reported that 300 were dead at Maan, 36 at Amman, 72 at Ramleh and 80 at Ludd. In Jericho there was but one victim, but the Winter Palace hotel collapsed and other buildings were damaged.

British military aviators from Transjordania helped in the rescue of many survivors, and relief work was got under way promptly. Pope Pius, deeply grieved by the catastrophe, sent instructions to the patriarchiate at Jerusalem concerning relief measures. The earthquake was felt in Egypt and caused great alarm but not much damage. On the same day there were severe temblors in Victoria, Australia.

Floods following a cloudburst in the valleys of the Gottleuba and Muglitz rivers, tributaries of the Elbe in Saxony, killed about 200 persons and devastated the valleys, burying the ruins of villages deep in mud. Troops and hundreds of relief workers were rushed to the rescue, the Red Cross leading the expedition and being followed by the communists, the Fascists, the "Steel Helmets" and the rebublican "Reichsbanner" forces, all united for once in the task of extricating and feeding the hapless survivors. The same violent storm that struck Saxony raged along the Alps and Apennines in northern and central Italy, doing vast damage.

KEVIN CHRISTOPHER O'HIGGINS, vice president of the Irish Free State, minister for justice and perhaps the leading man in the government, was assassinated as he was on his way to church in Booterstown, a suburb of Dublin. Three men fired bullets into his head and body and escaped in a motor car. O'Higgins, before his death a few hours later, whispered: "I go as Collins went and as my father went. I die as I have lived—for Ireland. I die at peace with my enemies and with God. I forgive them all."

The brutal murder caused intense indignation, not only in the Free State but throughout the world, and messages of sympathy were received by President Cosgrave from King George, the duke of Abercorn for northern Ireland and many other personages. Eamon de Valera denounced the crime as murder inexcusable from any standpoint and said he was confident the republican organization was not responsible for it. Ten men, all said to be connected with irregular organizations, were arrested, the charge being that as senior officers of secret groups they directed the conspiracy resulting in the assassination. One of the prisoners was a son of Count George Plunkett.

ANOTHER week of debate in the naval limitation conference at Geneva, and no definite results. Great Britain, still striving to maintain her predominance on the seas but not willing that the conference should fail, suggested a compromise solution of the cruiser problem. W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty, said if the United States would agree to limit the number of 10,000-ton cruisers to ten each for America and England and six for Japan, he would be prepared to accept the maximum tonnage figures of 400,000 tons fixed by the United States. Mr. Gibson and his colleagues might have reached some agreement with the British with this as a starter, although it was asserted in Washington that our government could not accept Bridgeman's figures. But here the Japanese stepped in with the flat statement that they would not go above 480,000 tons for cruisers and destroyers combined, this being the total for both categories as suggested in the original American plan. Viscount Saito said his delegation was ready to return home without any treaty, and that if the Americans and British could get together, they might as well sign a two-power pact. This, however, did not suit Mr. Gibson at all.

Mr. Bridgeman requested that a plenary session of the conference be held on Thursday. At this he, Mr. Gibson and Viscount Saito again set forth the positions of their respective governments in the matter of cruisers, and there was a formal review of what had been accomplished—if anything.

Talking to the correspondents, Mr. Gibson was optimistic. "We luckily hold a middle position" he said. "The Japanese are in full accord with our original figures and we can get an agreement with the British on increased tonnage totals under consideration. Now it is up to the British and Japanese to get together."

America has not definitely held out for 25 10,000-ton cruisers, Mr. Gibson added.

REPRESENTATIVES of the agriculturists in 15 Middle Western states, attending the Northwest farm conference in St. Paul, voted to support the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill until it becomes law, though they were willing it should be revised to meet President Coolidge's objections.

Drafted by Congressman Charles Brand of Ohio, the resolutions urged that the bill be changed:

To permit the President to select nominees for the federal board to stabilize prices of farm products, instead of having them chosen by farm organizations.

To make the bill general in its application so as to include all farm products, instead of the five specifically named in the bill which Mr. Coolidge vetoed.

MR. COOLIDGE received a call from representatives of the Western Stock Marketing association who presented a plan for extending the co-operative marketing process to the cattle business, and asked government aid in its organization. Extended to the entire Western range, as is suggested, cattle would be manipulated just as the fruit growers of California handle their crops, holding them until they get a certain minimum price. Such an organization would compel the packers to bargain for cattle on the ranches instead of in the Omaha and Chicago markets.

Among other visitors of the week at the summer White House were a large number of members of the National Women's party, just from their meeting in Colorado Springs, who presented to the President their demand for "equal rights for women." The farmers of North Dakota also sent a delegation to tell Mr. Coolidge that they are in favor of the St. Lawrence waterway project and a new diversion of the Missouri river waters through the James river valley and to urge the early completion of those projects.

FRANK O. LOWDEN, whose boom for the Presidential nomination has just received the indorsement of 10,000 residents of Montana, delivered an address before the Wisconsin legislature, and seemed to make an excellent impression. He confined his talk entirely to the problems of agriculture and the necessity for stabilization of prices of farm products. Especially vigorous applause greeted these two parts of the speech:

"What the farmer asks is that he be given the same right to name a price in the first instance and that he be enabled to acquire an organization which will secure to him the same power to maintain that price which other industries through their superior organization now enjoy."

"The federal farm board should be able to empower organizations of farmers to take control of the surplus and to distribute the cost of that operation not only among the members of the co-operatives but among all the producers, whether they are members or not."

HONOLULU is host, for two weeks, of the Institute of Pacific Relations, and 100 leading citizens of ten nations bordering on the Pacific or having especial interests in that ocean are trying to arrive at an understanding of the causes of friction between East and West. The conference is unofficial and the discussions are frank and open, with no germane topics forbidden.

Nearly 50 Americans are present, including Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford university and chairman of the institute; Prof. James T. Shotwell of Columbia university; Robert Dollar, president of the Dollar Steamship company; Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, lecturer of New York; Stephen P. Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, and Archbishop Edward J. Hanna of California.

EMULATING Oliver Cromwell, Marshal Pilsudsky has executed another coup d'etat in Poland by sending his soldiers into the senate and ordering it to dissolve because it would not pass laws he considered necessary without debating them. Pilsudski had given democratic rule a trial for about ten months but it wasn't satisfactory to him so he has resumed the absolute dictatorship.

PROHIBITION COMMISSIONER DORAN held a conference with his district administrators in Washington and warned them that honest physicians and retail druggists are not to be harrassed in the prescription or sale of liquor for medicinal purposes. Prohibition agents are not expected to practice medicine or pharmacy in the enforcement of the Volstead act, according to Commissioner Doran, who continued that doctors and druggists, as members of responsible professions, should be given an ample opportunity to explain apparently irregular practices before they are subjected to the expense of proceedings to revoke their permits.

WHETHER the two $1,000,000 libel suits against Henry Ford will be settled out of court as a result of his public retraction of and apology for the anti-Jewish articles in the Dearborn Independent is uncertain at this writing, but Aaron Sapiro said he was negotiating a settlement of his action. In Washington there was a mass meeting of Jews called to consider Ford's apology, and eloquent appeals for its acceptance in good faith were made. But a majority of those present preferred to wait and see if Ford's actions conform to his words. So the resolution of acceptance was rejected.

JOHN DREW'S death in San Francisco caused the nation to heave a sigh of regret, for the dean of the American stage was universally beloved and respected. His entire life had been given over to the work of entertaining the public with clean, intelligent and thoroughly artistic acting and he passed away "in the harness" though he had reached the age of seventy-three years. Another capable and popular actor, Gregory Kelly, died in New York after several months' illness.

DR. F. SCOTT M'BRIDE, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, has issued a statement saying the league will make every effort to elect a bone dry congress next year, despite the fact that many constitutional lawyers are of the opinion that any modification of the Volstead act would be held unconstitutional by the Supreme court of the United States. "The 1928 campaign," he says, "will be carried into every congressional district. Candidates who are not known friends of the prohibition cause will be opposed, while candidates who are friendly to prohibition will be supported to the fullest extent."

Denies Russ Tour Is Sponsored by A. F. L.

New York.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, charged that the aim of a delegation of trade unionists, sailing this month for Russia, is to bring about recognition of Russia by the United States and asserted his organization had no connection with the movement.

The delegation, he said, is composed of ten trade unionists and a large staff of economists and styles itself the American trade union delegation to Russia. Its report, he said, was to be made the basis of the campaign for recognition.

The following, Mr. Green said, are members of the commission: L. E. Sheppard, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, chairman; William Johnston, former president of the International Association of Machinists; E. J. Manion, president of the Order of Railway Telegraphers; Phil E. Zeigler, editor of the Railway Clerk; Timothy Shea, assistant president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; John Brophy, former president of District No. 2, United Mine Workers; Frank Palmer, editor of The Colorado Labor Advocate (Typographical union); William Mitch, Indiana state secretary of the United Mine Workers; Albert F. Coyle, editor of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Journal; James W. Fitzpatrick, president of the American Artists' and Actors' federation.

Russia Needs Capital to Develop Industry

In Russia the situation of three or four years ago has been reversed, and now concession seekers have almost vanished from the stage, while the government in its turn is hunting for capitalists to take over new enterprises.

Russia's woolen mills are reported to have shut down for a period on account of scarcity of raw materials. Flax mills closed for a month or six weeks for the same reason. Simultaneously, however, the commissariat for trade has ordered a 10 per cent reduction of prices. Some mills have obeyed, but have decreased the width of materials or reduced the quality of their goods.

According to German reports, the most promising field for the foreigner in Russia today is as a buyer of local produce. Concessions have proved money losers, and attempts to sell goods to Russia are defeated by the long-term credits demanded by the government trading bureau.—The Living Age.

A New Way to Make Jellies

Without Staining Fingers—Without Long Hours of Boiling—Without Depending Upon Berries or Fruit Being in Season.

One of the most interesting and yet one of the simplest new products in the food field is called minute jelly. It is pure fruit or berry juice already boiled down and concentrated. To this concentrated juice, fruit pectin in the right amount has been added. The pectin is that part of fruit which makes jelly "jell." It is as pure and wholesome as the fruit juice.

To make the jelly take the little bottle of concentrated juice, pour in a sauce pan, add water and sugar according to directions on the bottle and boil a few minutes. Then pour into jelly glasses and when it has become cold you have the most delicious pure fruit jelly you ever tasted.

A few bottles kept on hand, selected according to your taste for jellies, and you can make up a few glasses just as you want it. One small bottle makes two glasses of jelly. If you wish to try two bottles send us twenty-five cents and we will give you your choice of grape, mint, pineapple, orange, raspberry, strawberry or blackberry. Or four bottles—all different—for fifty cents. Address Department WU, General Packing Corp., Cranford, New Jersey.—Adv.

"'And how,' said the farmer's wife, 'did you come to lose such a nice home?'

"'Term expired,' said the tramp."

STORY FROM THE START

Garth Guthrie, Canadian war veteran, having to live in the open on account of weakened lungs, is factor of a Hudson's Bay post at Elkwan. He came back from the conflict with a permanently scarred face, which he realizes cost him the love of his fiancee, Edith Falconer. Sir Charles Guthrie, his brother, is a millionaire war profiteer. With Etienne Savanne, halfbreed, his firm friend, Garth meets Doctor Quarrier, geologist, and his sister Joan. Their schooner has drifted ashore. Quarrier complains he has been robbed by a man known as "Laughing McDonald." At Elkwan an Indian girl, Ninda, tuberculosis victim, whom Garth has befriended, is dying.

"Because, at present, my duty is here, as you can see."

Then the man, whose intimate knowledge of the inanimate had seemingly taught him little of men, laughed rawly:

"Your duty? Yes, I suppose when you fur people get yourselves into a mess of this kind," he nodded toward the door, "you feel you have to see it through."

Joan Quarrier rose from her chair, stunned by the stupid brutality of the remark—fearful of the retribution it deserved. Eyes black with anger, Guthrie glared at his guest, who, sensible of his mistake, grinned sheepishly, then flushed to the roots of his stiff hair. The muscles in the face of the factor knotted, the veins in the brown neck above the flannel shirt swelled with blood in his efforts at self-control.

"I—I went too far," Quarrier mumbled. "I didn't mean, of course—" But he was cut off short with:

"Your bed is in the trade-house! You know the way!"

The long arm of Guthrie pointed to the door.

For a space Quarrier stared into the cold eyes; then, stung by the outrage to his dignity, got to his feet in angry protest.

"What do you mean? You dare insult me—order me out of your house like an inferior?" But there was that in the face of the man whose arm still indicated the door which wrung the bluster from the geologist as water is wrung from a rag.

"You'll hear from this—this conduct of yours. I'll report this to your superiors," protested Quarrier, as he stormed out of the room.

Guthrie turned to the girl, who was visibly swept by shame—stirred by an emotion which left her weak, clouded eyes fixed on the man who said in a voice still thick with anger:

"I'm sorry, Miss Quarrier—so sorry. He—went—too far."

"You were right—he was impossible," she agreed in a voice raw with disgust, with a slow nod of the dark head. "He has always blundered—always failed to understand."

"I want to tell you about her."

She turned on him almost fiercely. "Do you think I, also, do not understand?" she demanded.

For a space he searched her tense, white face; then replied, cryptically, "You have served with the wounded; it is enough."

He went to the door and whispered to old Anne. Then he began:

"She came here in June with some Ojibwas, from far beyond the Elkwan headwaters, for this is a Cree country. They were not her own people, I am convinced, but one of the men claimed to be her father. She was not sure, for she had grown up with them—didn't even know her age, but she can't be more than eighteen. Old Anne found her sick in a tipi—half fed—neglected. We took her in, and for a time the canned milk and the broth worked a miracle. She was happy—too; that helped.

"When the trade was over and the Indians started for their summer camps, they demanded her—and she could hardly walk a hundred yards without resting. Of course, they didn't really want her; their purpose was to hold me up. They asked for everything in the store. They always do when such a thing happens—an Indian girl stays behind, at the factor's quarters.

"You see they thought this was the old situation—so did the Crees—in spite of what Anne told them. They couldn't understand. Well, I finally got rid of her people—kicked them out. For weeks she was so happy."

Guthrie tiptoed to the sickroom door, looked in, and returned.

"In her last conversation with the Indian who called himself her father, I heard her repeatedly say 'Nin da, nin da!' She was so earnest about it. I asked Etienne what it meant, and he told me it was Ojibwa for 'I stay here.' Pretty, isn't it? Nin da, I dwell here. She has chosen her home. So we called her Ninda. She was one of us.

"Miss Quarrier," went on the man whose face had softened—grown boyish, "it fairly tore my heart—the happiness, the gratitude of that sick child. Those big eyes of hers followed me like a dog's. I had rescued her, no doubt, from unspeakable misery. . . . It was only natural, I suppose.

"After a few weeks she began to fail, and in August, when they called me to Albany, I couldn't throw off the memory of the despair in her eyes when I left. You see she feared she would not live until I returned—wanted me there when it came. Her eyes haunted me—every mile of the coast.

"This last time when I went, she bade me good-by—was sure that it was the end. But we needed the geese—we had to go. . . . I've seen men die—my friends; but those wistful eyes! . . . It's tragic. . . . and she so young."

Guthrie stopped his pacing to run his fingers nervously through his dark hair.

"Oh, the dumb misery, here in the north! Think if she'd stayed with her people, to die in a tipi—neglected! I'm thankful if I've eased the loneliness—the pain—for one."

The sound of coughing, followed by Old Anne's frightened face in the doorway, summoned them to the other room. The effects of the opiate had worn off. The woman who had "served with the wounded" wiped the crimsoned lips that moved in vain attempt at utterance, as the large eyes, bright with fever, clung to the face of the man who sat beside the cot.

"You go to bed, Anne," said Guthrie to the wrinkled Cree. "I will be here the rest of the night." With muttered protest the old woman shuffled from the room.

Presently the dry lips of the sick girl again moved. "She wants to say something," said the nurse, and left them.

Guthrie bent over the pillow.

"You go—no more?" he faintly heard.

He smiled into the questioning eyes, as he shook his head. "No more—Ninda."

The heavy lids slowly drooped.

Through the slow hours of the night they sat beside the waif, who, out of the wilderness had come to Elkwan, and was now—returning. And in the intervals between her ministrations to the life which was slipping away, the guest of Guthrie learned much of the man with whom she shared the night watch.

In the candor of his explanation of the presence of the Indian girl at Elkwan, he had unconsciously revealed to the curious woman who studied him, intimate glimpses of heart. The emblem of the Distinguished Service order which he wore in the photograph in his bedroom vouched for his caliber as a soldier. But why, she mused, did the brother of the rich Charles Guthrie linger in the wilderness of the west coast when a girl of such loveliness as her three photographs suggested waited for his return? For the nature of their relations was established beyond doubt by the written sentiment on the photographs. Yet, his health returned, he seemed to be deliberately staying on in the north. What was behind it all, wondered Joan Quarrier; not pity for this poor child, who, in the manner of her kind, had given him worship for the only kindness life had vouchsafed her. That, clearly, would have anchored Guthrie at Elkwan while Ninda lived, but in face of the fact that the girl was desperately ill—could not live into the autumn, he had prepared to winter on the west coast. Why?

So, together, they kept their watch, where, through the halting hours, the spirit of the waif of the forests hovered, awaiting release. Once, after a paroxysm of coughing, the veil of delirium lifted and there was a moment of consciousness. He leaned to her and the fear which looked from the groping eyes faded as she recognized the scarred cheek. The wraith of a smile touched the drawn mouth.

As the stars paled above the purple tundra of Akimiski, again she recognized the face of Guthrie. Her lips moved. His straining ears caught a faint "Bo-jo," the Ojibwa farewell. . . . Then a crimsoned froth welled from the tortured lungs.

When she returned with Old Anne crooning her grief, she touched him on the shoulder.

"You must go now. We will care for her."

For a space he stood beside the cot, then said:

"Good-by, Ninda. As you wished it, you will stay—here, with your friends." He turned cryptically to the nurse. "She was a soldier; she did not flinch from wounds," and went out, followed by the puzzled eyes of the other.

Then, outside, in the cool dusk of the clearing rose a wail, mournful, unearthly, followed by another and another.

Joan Quarrier's face appeared in the doorway of the living room.

"It's too ghastly," she said with a shiver. "How do they know?"

"They always know—always wail for the dead." And he went out to quiet the dogs.

At the gate of the stockade stood the airedale, joining the huskies in their threnody under the fading stars. At Guthrie's command, the dog stopped and trotting up, with a muffled whine thrust his moist nose into his master's hand.

"Ninda's gone, Shot."

CHAPTER III

Daylight found man and dog on the high river shore. At times the man spoke to the airedale, who, sensing his master's mood, repeatedly returned from short excursions to nuzzle Guthrie's hand. Again and again, before the light came, the whimpering huskies had taken up their wailing, to be checked by the man on guard, whose thoughts traversed the swift weeks of the summer.

Out of the silent places, this doomed child of the valiant heart had come, and now—into the silence had gone. What must have been her despair, he thought, to have left her people and sought sanctuary among strangers. But it had been friends she had found.

But what a miracle to have had that schooner driven on Akimiski with the girl who had shared the watch with him! What a solace and rock she had been—those fine, straight-gazing dark eyes, and capable hands. It was because she had understood—had resented his thinking it necessary to explain the situation at Elkwan that he had been able to talk so freely of Ninda. She had proved her mettle—she, too, was a soldier. He pictured Ethel, with her horror of the ugly, thrown into the situation which Joan Quarrier had calmly met with delicacy and skill.

That afternoon Etienne and Guthrie erected a spruce cross over the fresh grave in the little post cemetery and on the white wood of the arm, Guthrie burned with a hot iron the inscription: "In Memory of Ninda—A Soldier," which for years was to be the cause of much shaking of puzzled heads among the whites and the Crees who saw it.

At dawn the following morning, Guthrie's York boat with a Peterboro canoe in tow, slowly picked its way through the river mist of the Elkwan delta. In the stern, steering with a sweep hewn from a spruce sapling, stood the wiry Etienne, who knew the channels of the river mouths and the depths of the shoal coast from the Raft to Albany. To give the craft steerage way on the first of the ebb, the sailors of the shipwrecked schooner manned four long oars. In the bow, the geologist, still smarting from his humiliation, talked in low tones to his sailing master. Beside the steersman stood Guthrie, holding a compass, for the shores were invisible. Near him, with forefeet on the rail the airedale peered into the white wall of mist, his black nostrils dilating as he caught, at intervals, on the moist air, scents vague, illusive, enticing.

"You are losing valuable time from your goose hunt by taking us to Albany in your boat," suggested Joan Quarrier to Guthrie, who had found a seat beside her.

"After what you've done, I could not send you off in that ship's boat. You might have been days making Albany—had serious trouble getting ashore to make camp if the wind changed. It's a tricky coast. You're not much like your dignified brother," he answered, his face lighting in amusement as he glanced toward the sulking Quarrier. "He's hardly worrying about our goose supply for the winter."

The clean-cut mouth of the man beside her curled in the smile she had come to associate with the factor of Elkwan. Then her eyes, shifting to the dim ribbon of spruce edging the marshes, saw the face of the girl of the photograph at the post, and she wondered what was behind it all.

He studied the profile of Joan Quarrier, the musing eyes with the strongly marked brows, the half-parted lips, the frame of chestnut hair shot with gold. Fine, it was, he thought with the beauty of expression; but above its comeliness of line and skin—the stamp of strength, the essence of character. The absent look faded from her eyes.

"I can understand on a day like this," she said, "what you mean by this gray coast holding you. It's so untouched—so primeval. It seems almost as if we were the first to see it."

"It's like this for a thousand miles—the west coast," he replied, "with a few fur posts at the mouths of the rivers."

"A thousand miles of silence—except the call of the geese."

"You won't be here for the Black Brant and the Grand geese. They are the last to reach the west coast—they and the swans."

"Swans?"

He nodded. "You haven't heard the voice of the raw solitudes if you've missed the trumpeting of the swans, high against the October stars."

"Man, you're growing poetic."

"The swans and the gray geese," he went on, "typifying it all—the silence, the loneliness, the beauty."

For a space she sat, chin in hand, heavy brows contracted. Then she looked up with: "Like so many, the din and excitement of the war—the disillusion of its aftermath, has left you with abnormal nerves. This loneliness which attracts you now will make a hermit of you—a brooding eccentric. Go back to Montreal before it's too late."

"Not until I've had it out with Laughing McDonald," he laughed.

"But whatever do you do in winter here? You'll admit it's forlorn enough then. Is it hard to keep warm in this terrible cold?"

"Cold? Why, it's colder on the north shore of Superior, and there's not as much snow. Of course when the wind blows it's cold on the sea ice. It's cold anywhere then."

"And so you're actually not lonely," she persisted, "I've heard of men going mad."

"Oh, of course, there are times—" His wind-burned face darkened as he avoided her look. "But there are compensations, you know. Shot!" The airedale left the rail and pushing between Guthrie's knees, lifted his whiskered muzzle with a throaty rumble, his eyes searching his master's face.

"Here is one. I couldn't be lonely with Shot, could I, old man?"

His tail beating the air, the nose of the airedale wrinkled in a display of formidable face smiling down at him.

"He worships you, doesn't he?" said the girl.

"We went through the last months together—comrades. You see he found two of us—gassed—and brought help."

The brown hands of Guthrie rubbed the airedale's small ears. Closing his eyes, Shot grunted in ecstacy.

"No, but we tire of pork, so when the goose is gone, go after caribou."

PASTED FEATHER SKULLCAPS AND HANDPAINTED FROCKS

AND now it's the feather toque or skullcap, more properly named, which is the newest star in the millinery firmament. They are nothing short of a midsummer sensation, these pasted feather caps, coming in so unexpectedly just as a fashionable clientele had been converted to the wearing of brims of the widest.

Maybe you are one who has always believed that it requires a hat broad of brim to interpret the picturesque. Catch a fleeting glimpse of one of these new pastel feather toques as worn with fluttering garden party frocks of flowery print and—well it's a woman's privilege to change her mind. As the elite in Paris wears the pastel pasted feather skullcap, it is always in tones to match the frock.

Some New Tips in Millinery.

There's another number on the midsummer millinery program which is eliciting much favor. It is the Agnes toque of white violets—so called because of the artiste modiste who created it. The moment you look at it as shown in this picture you will no doubt be saying "It's lovely." And so it is; perfectly adorable—made more so because of the huge cluster of matching violets which are always worn with it.

This white violet chapeau lends itself beautifully to the season's all-white ensembles which are so definitely representative of the present season's fashions.

Latest Whim of the Mode.

Speaking of the modish new feather turbans, as shown at the top in this picture, they apparently are the prologue to a coming vogue for feathery millinery. Even now flat feather motifs are appearing on straw and felt hats.

Then, too, scores of little snug-fitting hats have their contour diversified by conspicuous feather side-trims of the shaving brush type. Women always like this type of trimming, for not only does it "carry style" in the truest sense of the word, but it is very flattering to the wearer. If your felt or straw close-fitting hat is not as becoming as you wish it were, just add one of the new shaving brush feather trims and note its transforming effect.

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?" "I am going a' yachting, sir," she most likely answers. To prove that she has tuned her costume to the occasion, she holds to view the sleeve of her blouse, which, as you will observe, according to the center figure in this picture, is hand painted, showing a nautical scene of a proud ship sailing over some very blue waves—all this in the name of fashion.

It is really quite exciting the way white sails speed over wild waves pictured with paint and brush, across the ends of one's scarf, or perhaps upon the front of one's blouse, or on one's necktie or kerchief square for the neck. If a tennis enthusiast, it will be an alert figure posing a racket in midair which adorns her summer blouse, or a golf player in action, if such be the event.

Considering the vogue for hand painted apparel, it behooves the artist, either amateur or otherwise, to lose no time in getting out palette and brush preparatory to taking up the fascinating pastime of embellishing frock, blouse, smock, coolie coat, hat and also parasol with wonderful birds of paradise, or exotic flowers, or if your taste runs that way, flamboyant modernistic motifs. And would you believe it, some modern maidens there are who, doting on unique and pretty underthings, are decorating their step-ins and their nightrobes with butterflies, birds and flowers.

If there is one place more than another where bizarre hand painting finds placement it is on the back of one's coolie coat, which, by the way, is extremely popular either for boudoir or beach. Students at the art schools, too—what delight they are taking in wearing coolie coats which are enlivened with gay paintings a la chinoise. The picture shows two such pretty coats adorned in this way.

Now that wide ribbons trim so many hats, they are frequently hand painted with garlands of flowers or quaint figures. It is also quite the fashion to paint directly on the straw, felt or crochet visca hat.

New Colors

"Mezzo-tint harmonies" is what the new compose colors are called. Pinks tint into soft creams, orchids into blues, greens into tea-rose yellows and so on. Chiffons, georgettes and voiles usually exemplify the new shades.

Tulle Dance Frocks

Tulle frocks in pastel shades and in black are much worn by younger women. They are charming dance frocks and are usually made with tight waists and full ruffled skirts.

Prints Plaited for Sports Skirts

An example of the smartness and charm of the new modes for summer is seen in a costume which has a finely plaited skirt of blue-flowered silk and a white sweater with a border of blue stripes. There is also a handkerchief scarf of the printed silk.

Tailored Chiffon

The new chiffon dresses are exquisitely tailored, with all the little touches that used to belong to heavy materials.

If you are planning to trade-in your present car for a new car, remember these facts:

1 When you trade-in your used car for a new car, you are after all making a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of the new car.

2 Your used car has only one fundamental basis of value; i. e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.

3 Your used car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.

4 The largest allowance is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.

5 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.

6 First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your used car.

Rays Solve Crime

Criminals who alter documents with any ink that contains iron can be detected by ultra-violet rays, according to Professor Bruning, Berlin scientist, in Popular Science Monthly. Postal thieves who open letters and reseal them also are branded guilty by the rays; one kind of mucilage, for instance, glows with a fluorescent light under the rays, while another does not.

Artificial pearls, however skillfully made, are revealed as false, as are imitation diamonds. The finest genuine diamonds shine with a magnificent purple light under rays of the ultra-violet lamp.

Guessed Wrong

Then Papers Noticed Him

William B. Skillman, running for alderman in Brooklyn, did not get much attention from the newspapers and his campaign was not getting anywhere. One day each of the papers received a telegram charging Skillman was living with a woman not his wife. The papers "ate it up." Then an investigation showed Skillman had sent the telegrams himself, signing an assumed name. "Sure, what of it?" said he when accused of this. "It's all true. I am living with my mother."—Capper's Weekly.

Rats not only grow large, but they grow hard in the Granite state's Rochester. A rat was recently caught in a trap in that city which measured 15½ inches from tip of its nose to the tip of its tail. Bancitaly Publishes Current Statement

Bancitaly Corporation, largest of the world's investment trusts, always taking the lead in the unusual, kept up this record by making public this week in connection with the publication of its current statement of condition, the list of its principal holdings.

Profits for the period covered by the statement from February 8 to July 22, are $8,133,370.40, more than three times the dividend paid for April and July, totaling $2,633,902.93.

The invested capital is now $217,377,813.77 as a result of the increase in the number of issued shares on July 2, from 2,250,000 to 3,150,000. On July 29, payment of 40 per cent stock dividend will increase the issued shares to 4,410,000 and in addition there will be 140,000 shares of Treasury Stock, including the present 100,000 and the 40,000 that will be added through the stock dividend.

"The Treasury stock will be sold when it reaches $125 and on and after July 29, the date of the stock dividend, at $89-1-2, no more, no less," said L. M. Giannini, Executive Vice-president of the corporation, "and we do not propose for the present to issue any additional shares when that is gone. We are making public a list of our general investments, that includes practically all of the corporation's major hodings. This also includes the larger holdings of bank stocks. Other bank stocks owned are practically the same as at the time the last previous list was published. This will permit the public to see just what the corporation owns."

The intention of continuing the full annual dividend of $2.24 on all shares issued under the stock dividend has been announced. This as equivalent to a 40 per cent increase in the dividend rate, and means that the return on the original shares of $100 par value will now be $15.68. This results from the previous stock split, of 4 for 1, together with a 25 per cent stock dividend, plus the 40 per cent stock dividend or 7 shares for 1.

A Communication

Burlingame, July 28, 1927.

Mr. C. J. Eldridge,
Chairman District Committee,
San Mateo County Boy Scouts,
Burlingame, California.

Dear Sir:

After reading your letter of the 14th instant addressed to Mr. D. E. O'Keefe relative to the incident in Memorial Park, I feel that the discussion leaves its readers in rather a doubtful frame of mind as to whether anything did or did not happen in Memorial Park.

You say that it is your opinion, since the camp authorities have no record of the incident, that the statement is absolutely unfounded; this you have a perfect right to since in all probability the matter was not reported, and on this account I feel that you as chairman of this organization should know just what did happen.

On Saturday, July 2nd in company with my brother, I walked over to see the swimming pool that was built for the Boy Scouts simply to see it as completed, for we had been there a week before during the construction of the dam and were somewhat interested to see the result.

Knowing the short trail leading to it we took this trail which traverses the flat below the mess hall and were about half way when two small boys came running after us asking for a pass to come in, that it was private property and you had to have a pass to pass through This we treated lightly telling the boys that it was not private property but the property of the County.

We passed a little further and had reached a point from which a view of the pool could be had and stopped there long enough to satisfy our curiosity and were about to retrace our steps when down comes one of the Scout Officers from the camp above us, trailed by quite a group of small boys and a larger group of boys remained at the top as spectators.

This officer very impertinently said, "You have passed our guards and must leave, if not force will be used for there is a deputy sheriff in the camp that will force you," whereupon we suggested that the deputy sheriff be sent for while we waited on the trail. Instead of a deputy sheriff coming to use the force promised a Mr. Roberts appeared who seemed to size up the situation at a glance and with extreme courtesy explained things to us in such a way that it lessened the sting of embarrassment and resentment that took possession of both of us, and we thereupon proceeded on our way.

The relating of the incident to others by me happened in the natural course of conversational affairs and if it so happens that anyone chooses to use it for comment, why, I suppose they have that right if they so choose.

I am satisfied that the Boy Scout movement is doing great things for boys and I Would be the last person to interfere with any of its activities or do anything to undue or impair its organization or any organization along similar lines; but it appeared to me that since the incident reached the point of discussion that it has, it is only far to you as principal in the organization to know the real facts.

I hold a very great feeling for Memorial Park for the reason that I, representing the County Auditor in converence with our County Board of Supervisors at the time of the purchase of the park, played what I consider a prominent part in securing the funds that made the purchase possible, and I delight upon my visits there to see the pleasures that it affords those that go there for the recreation that the park was intended to bequeath.

Yours very truly,
EDWARD M. STACK,
238 Myrtle Road, Burlingame

MOTOR REGISTRATIONS SHOW STATE'S GAIN

An increase of 130,875 in the number of registrations of motor vehicles in California during the firts six months of 1927 over year ago has been reported by the corresponding period of a officials of the Division of Motor Vehicles.

Evidencing the contention of the department that the socalled "point of saturation" is far from being reached and adding proof of the general prosperity of the state, the report shows a net gain of 15.4 per cent in the number of vehicles in a year. The total inclusive of passenger cars, solid and pneumatic tired trucks, motorcycles and trailers was 1,625,766.

This does not include non-residents, cars exempt from license fees as those owned by cities, counties and the state and public service corporations and those registered as dealers cars. These would add several thousand to the total.

The division reports 130,875 more vehicles on the highways now than a year ago.

All counties in the state showed gains. Even isolated Alpine, the state's baby county, came in with 46 cars against 41 last year.

Los Angeles county kept its usual record by registering better than one-third of the vehicles, its total being 645,549. San Francisco came second with 126,163 and Alameda third with 119,067.

Production at the Nash plants in Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee of 700 to 800 cars a day is greater than at any time in the history of the company. This announcement made today by officials of the Nash Motors Company is coupled with the further statement that in spite of the record production orders from dealers for the new models, announced three weeks ago, are in excess of the combined capacity of the three Nesh plants and the orders therefore are being filled in rotation as they are received. The situation bears out the statement made by C. W. Nash to the board of directors in which he pointed out that the last six months period would be "extremely active
